Max Kampelman Paid Fellowships

The Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe seeks candidates for its Max Kampelman Fellowship. The program is open to students and recent graduates with previous internship experience. Fellows work in political and military affairs, economic and environmental matters, or respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. Fellowships last from three to four months with a minimum of three days per week. Fellows are paid hourly and offered ongoing enrichment, professional development, and networking opportunities facilitated by senior commission staff. Open to US citizens, permanent residents, people admitted as a refugee/granted asylum, and others who owe allegiance to the US.
