Experiential learning in Puebla, Mexico, based on the community-learning model of Paulo Freire. Participants learn directly from the Mexican people via lively two-way conversations with workers, spiritual and civic leaders, refugees, social workers, human rights activists, indigenous peoples, children, adults, and elders. Students visit remote communities where they gain knowledge about Mexican culture; individual, family, and community responses to poverty; historical patterns of oppression; spirituality and liberation theology; global economics and policy, and the role of indigenous movements. Included are discussions on the relationship between poverty in Mexico and policies in the U. S.; experiences of documented and undocumented immigrants to the U.S. and Canada; and international trade policies.

SCHEDULE: 3 two-hour briefing sessions Fall Quarter. Experiential learning in Puebla, MX December 1-13, 2015.

LANGUAGE: No Spanish Required

COST: Total cost approximately $2800

This course is part of your fall quarter course load. The flat rate tuition applies for students enrolled for 12-18 credits.

INTERESTED?
1. Come to the info session and/or talk with students who went last year.
2. Space is limited!
3. Faculty lead : Ramona Beltran, Ramona.beltran@du.edu