The Humanitarian Assistance Program presents

Perspectives from the ground: the refugee crisis in Greece

David Bopp

David Bopp will share his recent experiences on the ground in Lesvos, Greece. He will discuss his direct work with and the experiences of the refugees he encountered, the variety of actors involved, the politics found in Moria camp, and the frustration of suddenly being restricted from providing medical assistance. He is open to as many queries as time allows.

David Bopp is currently working towards a MA in International Administration from the University of Denver. He began working in the field of humanitarian assistance and disaster risk reduction in 2009 for a small Colorado-based NGO. Through various small NGOs, David has had the opportunity to work in over 30 countries and has coordinated responses ranging from Haiti, Pakistan, Indonesia, the Philippines, Lebanon, Nepal, and Greece.
